There wasn't much movement at the top of the list, with Fonterra and JBS keeping first and second places. Despite reporting a financial loss of $605 million, Fonterra has once again topped the list. It was the second loss for the company in two years, a first for the company in its 17-year history and what CEO Miles Hurrell called an incredibly difficult year. Meat company JBS took its place as it embarked on two major sustainability initiatives and acquired White Stripe Foods to increase its distribution capabilities. Drinks giants Coca-Cola Amatil and Lion continued their dance since last year, exchanging venues this year to take a position of #3 and #4 respectively, after Lion posted a 23.41 percent drop in revenue. Similarly, Treasury Wine Estates and Teys traded points this year in #5 and #6 with the Treasury reporting a 17.11 per cent rise in revenue, while Ingham remained strong at #7. Nestlé dropped two points #10 to make room for the two companies that came out thundering from the back of the pack. Carlton & United Breweries soared from #14 to #8, but it was Saputo Dairy that really came from behind, ascending from #34 to #9. Saputo's rise is due to its $1 billion acquisition of Murray Goulburn and Warrnambool Cheese & Butter becoming the largest dairy processor in Australia. It had the highest revenue growth on the list, at 220.84 percent. As a result, George Weston Foods (#9 in 2018) and Goodman Fielder (#10 in 2019) were eliminated from the Top 10 altogether, landing on #11 and #12 respectively.
